Sabbath School Lesson No. 6
August 9, 1969
Subject: "Love Your Enemies"
Memory Verse: "But I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you." Matt. 5:44.
Lesson Outline: Introduction. First section. The command to love our enemeies. Q1. Contrary to human nature. Rom. 8:7. Q2. Not a new commandment. Lev. 19:18, Deut. 10: 17-19. Q3. For God's people today. John 13:34, Luke 6:27-29. Q4. Lack of love in the time of the end prophesied. 2 Tim. 3:1,2 (1st part) Matt. 24:12. Section two, Those who hate are earmarked. Q5. They walk in darkness. 1 John 2:9,11. Q6. They are not truthful, I John 4:20. Q7. They are murderers. I John 3:15. Section three, The love that loves the enemy. Q8. Heaven-born. John 3:16. I John 4:9. Q9. A fruit of the Spirit. Rom. 5:5. Gal. 5:22. Q10. The outgrowth of forgiveness. Luke 7:47. Section four. Examples of those who loved their enemies. Q11. Christ. Luke 23:34. Q12. Stephen, Acts. 7:55-60. Q13. Paul. II Corn. 2:4-8.
Note – The Command, "Love your enemies" is not easy to carry out. Humanly speaking it is impossible because the natural feeling of the heart is "an eye for an eye, and tooth for a tooth" Matt. 5:38. But the Christlike way is "Love your enemies." He treated us this way, and He bids us to follow in his footsteps.
Many believe that the new commandment is Love thy neighbor as thyself." This is an old commandment. Lev. 19:18. The new commandment supports the perpetuity of God's law, Jesus said, "if ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love, as I have loved you; even as i have kept my father's commandments and aiode in his love," John 15:10. The best proof for the perpituity of the law is found in the statement. "As I have loved you", or the death of Christ. If the law could have been changed, or done away with, then the death of Christ would not have been necessary. "A new commandment I give unto you," Jesus said, "That ye love one another, as I have loved you." What a wonderful statement. John 13:34.

Participation Sought In ASC Elections

Every eligible voter is urged to participate in the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) community and county committee elections State ASC Committee Chairman Jim Sam Gillespie, said today.

ASC community committee elections will be held the third week in September, and slates of nominees now are being compiled at the ASCS County Office.

"This year it seems to me especially important that farm owners, operators, tenants, and sharecroppers not only vote but also nominate and work for candidates of their choice," said Chairman Gillespie.

"The ASC committee system is the vital communications between the individual farmer and Washington in the administration of farm programs such as crop acreage stabilization and commodity price supports. Farm programs are tailored to fit national needs and concerns of change.

"County ASC Committes may well be called upon for local administration of new farm programs before many months have passed. We need the best possible representation of farm interests in our area. We need community and county committee members who will give time and effort to providing fair, effective, and knowledgeable administration of the programs," Mr. Gillespie continued.

Nominations for community committee candidates may be made by petition by eligible voters and by incumbent ASC community and county committees. Boundaries of each community will be publicized, as will more detailed information on eligibility of voters and candidates, nominations and elections. The County ASC committee is elected by newly elected community committeemen who serve as delegates to the county convention, said Chairman Gillespie.

New Program To Aid College 'Failures'

Each year, thousands of young Americans reach a low point in their lives when they receive notification via the deans' offices that they have flunked out of college. In a new program initiated last year to save some of these "failures", Monroe College in Middletown, Va. offers a one semester course called "A Program for College Success."

Tests are administered to determine the student's areas of difficulty, and special work is assigned to strengthen his background. His classes emphasize writing composition and reading comprehension with concentrated studies in math, social studies, and foreign language.

Upon completion of these studies, the student returns to his original campus prepared for a second try. "So far, so good," says Monroe president Howard Wilbur. "All our retreads are succeeding. Mostly it is a question of the individual utilizing proper study habits and disciplining himself to the actual schedule of studying."
